

CLOSE to my HEART[®]

JULY-AUGUST 2023

One thing I'm grateful for is that it's never too late to learn something new! These days especially, it seems the only limit to what you can learn is your own curiosity and openness to new ideas. Thanks to the incredible number of sources of information—books, documentaries, podcasts, YouTube videos, and countless others—I've discovered that I can almost always find materials to help me learn more about any subject that piques my interest.

Do you ever ask yourself when the last time was that you learned something new? I hope you do! At Close To My Heart, we are always looking to share ideas to help you discover and embrace new ways of preserving your memories and celebrating your treasured relationships. This includes teaching new artwork techniques, new uses for crafting tools, and exploring new memory keeping methods.

Any time you learn something especially helpful, I hope that you make a point of sharing it with someone. This way new ideas can continue spreading and enlightening other crafters!

Keep on learning!

In Which We Are Introduced To Winnie-the-Pooh And Some Bees, And The Stories Begin Here is Edward Bear, coming downstairs now, bump, bump, bump, on the back of his head, behind Christopher Robin. It is, as far as he knows, the only way of coming downstairs, but sometimes he feels that there really is another way, if only he could stop bumping for a moment and think of it. And then he feels that perhaps there isn't. Anyhow, here he is at the bottom, and ready to be introduced to you, Winnie-the-Pooh. When I first heard his name, I said, just as you are going to say, "But I thought he was a boy!" "So did I," said Christopher Robin. "Then you don't call him Winnie?" "I don't." "But you said—" "He's Winnie-the-Pooh. Don't you know what 'the' means?" "Ah, yes, now I do," I said quickly, and I hope you do too, because it is all the explanation you are going to get. Sometimes Winnie-the-Pooh likes a game of some sort when he comes downstairs, and sometimes he likes to sit quietly in front of the fire and listen to a story. This evening—"What about a story?" said Christopher Robin. "What about a story?" I said. "Would you very sweetly tell Winnie-the-Pooh one?" "I suppose I could," I said. "What sort of stories does he like?" "About himself. Because he's that sort of Bear." "Oh, I see." "So could you very sweetly?" "I'll try," I said. So I tried. Once upon a time, a very long time ago now, about last Friday, Winnie-the-Pooh lived in a forest all by himself under the name of Sandora. ("What does 'under the name' mean?" asked Christopher Robin. "It means he had the name over the door in gold letters, and lived under it." "Winnie-the-Pooh wasn't quite sure," said Christopher Robin. "Now I am," said a growly voice. "Then I will go on," said I.) One day when he was out walking, he came to an open place in the middle of the forest, and in the middle of this place was a large oak tree, and, from the top of the tree, there came a loud buzzing-noise. Winnie-the-Pooh sat down at the foot of the tree, put his head between his paws and began to think. First of all he said to himself: "That buzzing-noise means something. You don't get a buzzing-noise like that, just buzzing and buzzing, without it meaning something. If there's a 'buzzing-noise', somebody's making a buzzing-noise, and the only reason for making a buzzing-noise that I know of is because you're a bee." Then he thought another long time, and said: "And the only reason for being a bee that I know of is making honey." And then he got up, and said: "And the only reason for making honey is so I can eat it." So he began to climb the tree.
